REPERCUSSIONS OF A WAR WITH IRAN

In the days of ancient Rome, the mighty Roman soldiers of the emperor were stationed throughout the world to “keep the peace” and troops were so spread out and the tax burden on the rich became so burdensome, that farmers sold their farms to pay tax bills. Hu refused to have children (the cost of living was too high), and many citizens turned to the Roman “welfare system” just to have military was fighting wars on three fronts. This sounds a little like the road America is traveling on.

The United States has the greatest military on earth. Our armed forces are in many nations helping to “keep the peace” and preven (such as with North and South Korea). The national debt of America is actually estimated at $9 trillion, which includes interest ow Reserve and other nations on the money our government borrows from them to pay bills. There is talk among certain political car taxes on the rich, which is an echo of Rome. Presently, many are clamoring about government bailouts to help the many crises th out of nowhere.

Recently, an Israeli defense minister stated that if Iran does not cease its nuclear program and enriching uranium, Israel would stri remove the threat of Iran creating a deadly nuclear bomb capable of reaching Israel’s cities. Some now suggest an Iranian nuclear completed within 18 months.

As the clock ticks and the sun sets in the West, Israel is running out of time by the day. Are the Israeli Air Force and defense forces on Iran? Without a doubt! Israel has in their arsenal weapons that have never been used in a major war. Their survival has dep science and military research teams developing high-tech weapons. The possible repercussions of a strike against Iran, however, Middle East.

The Arab nations have never connected with the Persians of Iran. The Persians do not consider themselves Arabs, and the Arabs b for numerous difficulties throughout history. Most Middle Eastern Arabs who are Muslims tend to be Sunni; however, the Iranians a while both groups are Islamic in their faith, they have several differences that have birthed wars between them for centuries.

If America started an Iranian attack, there would be one form of opposition, mostly from China and Russia who have close ties to Jewish state may initiate the first strike, it may cause riots and anger in the Islamic nations. The twisted perception will be that the Je to take over the Middle East. I recall in 1973 when the United States sent weapons to Israel assisting them in winning the Yom Kipp oil cartel retaliated by stopping shipments of oil into the United States. Prices soared, gas lines seemed endless, and a recession stri lightning bolt in a summer storm.

Three main points are being considered as the drums of war begin to beat again in the Persian Gulf region:

Will Iran retaliate by attempting to block the Strait of Hormuz, a narrow waterway between the Gulf of Oman in the southeast and the Persian Gulf in the southwest? and Iranian small ships can drop underwater explosives into the sea, thus preventing war ships and oil ships from entering and exiting the waterway. Thirty per supply passes through this waterway, which is 21 miles wide in its narrowest point.

The radical president of Iran, Achmadinijab, has begun filling up a huge oil tanker with oil. Much speculation has been discussed regarding his plans. I believe if explode the ship, dumping tons of oil into the Persian Gulf and attempt to light oil creating black smoke to interfere with satellite photographs and war planes. Sadi ignited them during his war with America, creating dull, choking black smoke in the atmosphere.

Will the fanatic of Iran attempt to shoot missiles into Iraq, at the United States military bases? There is a real concern that, knowing he is being attacked, the Iranian wells, refineries and other important petrol facilities in the surrounding Gulf nations. In reality, it would be impossible to stop or shoot down the hundreds of possible released.

Be assured that every possible scenario has been discussed in the event of a pre-emptive attack. Based on two different ni several years ago, both may allude to an attack on Iranian nuclear facilities, or a possible terror attack in the United States. V be a season of great difficulty to follow. However, believers must rest in our faith that God is permitting a shaking of the nat and backsliders will turn their unbelief into a searching faith for the only God who controls the destiny of the world.
